Backyard science EP.19

Backyard science includes a range of experiments. All of the experiments were done in the house places such as kitchen and the bedroom and backyard.

The host of the show were adults but the host of the experiments were kids. This episode taught us how to make a egg silver, how to hear noise from far away, how to play with light. This episode was awesome. I liked how the experiments were very detail and easy to do. Backyard is fun and education and easy to understand and you can do at home it is quick and easy introduced science to kids who like science their were boys and girls

I would recommend this show to everybody.
